British Transport Police and Network Rail are working together to reduce antisocial behaviour at Network Rail-managed stations. We have introduced a scheme to tackle this issue.

Stations operated by Network Rail are private property with implied permission to all members of the public to enter the property and use the facilities available in the station and its shopping plaza areas. This implied permission can be revoked by Network Rail should it be deemed necessary.

Your repeated display of antisocial and/or disruptive behaviour at the station has resulted in Network Rail withdrawing its permission for you to enter the station. You are hereby given official notice that the implied permission for you to enter the station has been withdrawn for six months from the date above.

Your Withdrawal of Implied Permission Notice will be active until 30/5/25 30/12/25.

After this date, you will be allowed to enter the station again. However, should you engage in antisocial behaviour at the station, Network Rail may again withdraw its permission for you to enter London King's Cross Station and may revoke its permission for a longer period of time.

Where this notice is breached, further action may be taken. This could include seeking for the criminal courts to issue a Criminal Behaviour Order (CBO). A CBO could exclude you from certain areas, stop you from associating with other people or stop you from carrying certain items or behaving in a particular way. A CBO could also require you to attend courses or participate in specified activities.

Posters are displayed clearly on the station prohibiting access to those who have an active Withdrawal of Implied Permission (WIP) notice, from entering or remaining on any part of the station.

YOU NO LONGER HAVE PERMISSION TO ENTER THE STATION AREA OF London
King's Cross Station

The station area includes:

- The station itself
- Any premises upon the station
- Outer seating/shopping areas
- Any property identified as belonging to Network Rail upon or attached to the station
- You are also prohibited from accessing London Underground stations via this managed station where applicable.

During this period you may enter the station under the following circumstances ONLY:

- (1) You have a pre-arranged appointment with British Transport Police
- (2) You have a pre-arranged appointment whereby you have to travel immediately from this station and have notified British Transport Police in advance of your intention to travel. British Transport Police will then escort you to your train. British Transport Police can be contacted using the freephone number 0800 40 50 40
- (3) You need to enter the station in order to notify the emergency services of a situation.

Failure to comply with this notice may mean that you are committing an act of trespass or unauthorised access or loitering and British Transport Police may seek to arrest you. The legislation on which the British Transport Police will rely is:

Section 46 of the Railways Act (2005)

Byelaw 13 unauthorised access/loitering on the railway:

- (1) No person shall enter or remain on any part of the railway where there is a notice
 - (i) Prohibiting access; or
 - (ii) Indicating that it is reserved or provided for a specified category of person only, except where he belongs to that specified category.
- (2) No person shall loiter on the railway if asked to leave by an authorised person.

Section 16 of the Railway Regulation Act 1840 Trespass

If any person shall willfully trespass upon any railway, or any of the stations or other works or premises connected therewith, and shall refuse to quit the same upon request to him made by any officer or agent of the said company, every such person so offending, and all others aiding or assisting therein, shall and may be seized and detained by any such officer or agent.

It is an offence to willfully trespass on any railway or premises connected therewith and to refuse to leave when asked to do so by any officer or agent of the railway company. 'Wilfulness' can be proved by the refusal to leave.

A copy of this letter will be provided to the courts if necessary as evidence that you have been given sufficient warning about your behaviour and have been told you are not allowed to enter the station.
